

<http://www.barackobama.com/index.php>

Opportunity to Express Gratitude to the Deserved

Dr. N. N. Sarker, nsarker@hotmail.com

6 March 2008

I couldn't find the statement in which Gandhi said that one responsibility of democracy (something like) to bring the minority in the forefront. He must have stated in nineteen forties or before. I see his word in action in this great country of the United States of America and in his own country as well.

This is the land of opportunity. With his wisdom, skill, power and capability, Senator Obama is in his way to make the final history by becoming the President of America. He is in the making of history every day, every moment. It has been possible because USA is truly a democratic country. It is because of the democratic mindset of these Caucasian people since the Roman times.

Let's assume, Senator Obama is a Superman. Can he become the president if he were a minority in Cuba, Venezuela, Jordan, or Syria or Saudi Arab? The answer is, "It's stupid question." For the communist/socialist Cuba you need to be the brother of Castro, for the socialist/communist Venezuela, you need to be Chavez's brother or son or daughter; for Jordan or Syria or Saudi Arabia you need to be the family member of the current king or president. But in America, you may even have a plus point if you belong to the minority group.

Senator Obama is definitely not a superman. I believe there are candidates who are as good, if not better, as Obama in the Democratic Party. But he has been shining much more than anybody else. He has been raising more money than any other candidates. Who have been contributing the most and who are instrumental for all these happening in the USA now? The answer is simple. This is the act of the jubilant Whites of USA. I believe they deserve a simple thank you. With the opportunity of Obama picture in this tidal wave, I get courage to express my overwhelming thank you, appreciation, and gratitude to the Caucasian people. Now is the opportune time. Because, should he not become the President, all blames will go to the Whites and I'll be put to the eternal hellfire.

Some Deshis and communist mindsets may get upset with me. They appreciate the Whites only when in need. They appreciate while they are inside the American Embassy for visas. Soon after landing here, they start their complaints; they are not getting assistantship because of their skin color. They don't get job because of their color and names; they don't get promotion because of the same reason. In early nineties, one deshi gleefully told his story how he and other minorities in America cornered one White in the job place ultimately forcing him to quit. Poor white guy probably could not realize that he became the victim of reverse discrimination. Where could he go to complain?

This deshi had managed a student visa but did not go to school. By deceiving INS, he started making money working in McDonald's and Dollar Stores. While holding legal status we somehow maintained one 10 year old car, this deshi with illegal status bought a new car and had an easy life bickering the whites all the time. The INS finally caught and deported him back home. His brother-in-law was falling behind with his graduate studies. He worked in Domino's and Dollar Stores. Brought home 12-pack soda every day and piled inside the bathroom. His research was excellent (!) to get Nobel Prize but his supervisor was a racist (!) who was never pleased because of his skin color. Finally he got the degree but could not get any job in the USA because his first name was Mohammed.

I see danger into the future as the population of the Caucasian race is dwindling. I see danger if the future generations of America cannot inherit the legacy of these race for which America is great today. I, as an immigrant, came to this country to lead a better life here. But the previous generations migrated here knowing the struggle ahead in building this land for their grandchildren to have better lives. I know deshis will promptly cite the stories of native Indians which I don't deny. But you too are comforting by sitting on the dead bodies of those native Indians.

Note: Praising America and its mainstream people may cause heartburn to some. But I don't have any elixir to that.
So I'll not respond.